Actual-size reproduction. Kunsthalle in Hamburg.

Rembrandt's painting was purchased by Duke Peter of Courland at a sale in Amsterdam in 1777. It was in the collection of Dutch paintings displayed at Rundāle. In 1795 the Duke's art collections were transported to Sagan Palace in Silesia. In 1847 the descendants of Duke Peter's daughter Pauline, Princess of Hohenzollern-Hechingen, moved part of the artworks to Löwenberg Palace, but around 1858 the painting was sold. In 1912 it was obtained by the Hamburger Kunsthalle which purchased it from a private collector.
